

Jesse McCurry grew up on a farm and Angus cattle ranch near Mt. Hope, Kansas.

He graduated from Kansas State University in 2000 with a B.S. in Agricultural Communications and Journalism. In 2002, he graduated with an M.A. in Communication Studies, writing his master's thesis on the 2002 farm bill.

He has written extensively for industry publications, including: Angus Journal, Ethanol Producer Magazine, AgWeb.com and Midwest Producer.

Upon completion of his studies he worked for the Kansas Department of Commerce.

At Kennedy and Coe, LLC, since 2006, Jesse develops business relationships with prospective clients and industry partners in the areas of agriculture and bioscience.

Jesse has served on the boards of several organizations, including: Agribusiness Council of Wichita, Sedgwick County KLA committee, Colwich Planning Commission and Alpha Gamma Rho. He is also active in his church and several civic organizations.

Jesse is a graduate of KARL Class X.

He lives in Colwich with his Wife (Rhonda) and two children (Jackson and Anna).